The Department of Chemical Engineering and Biotechnology at Cambridge University is one of the UK's leading research departments, ranking highly in both national and international University league tables. The department's research strategy responds to the global drive for sustainability, addressing the need for novel chemical engineering and biotechnology processes and materials.

Historically, the chemical engineer has been primarily concerned with process engineering, which can generally be divided into two complementary areas: chemical reaction engineering and separation processes. The modern discipline of chemical engineering, however, encompasses much more than just process engineering.

Learn classical thermodynamics alongside statistical mechanics with this fresh approach to the subjects. Molecular and macroscopic principles are explained in an integrated, side-by-side manner to give students a deep, intuitive understanding of thermodynamics and equip them to tackle future research topics that focus on the nanoscale.

Hopefully, as the framework is now maturing, more such papers will appear. Extent of this site's coverage of the Threshold Concept Framework This bibliography initially reflected the interests of the compiler but, over a decade, has been massively extended to cover most disciplines and topics in which there are published papers on the threshold concept framework.
