Skin effect is the tendency of an alternating electric current (AC) to become distributed within a conductor such that the current density is largest near the surface of the conductor, and decreases with greater depths in the conductor. The electric current flows mainly at the "skin" of the conductor, between the outer surface and a level called the skin depth.

In physics, the Poynting vector represents the directional energy flux (the energy transfer per unit area per unit time) of an electromagnetic field. The SI unit of the Poynting vector is the watt per square metre (W/m²). It is named after its discoverer John Henry Poynting who first derived it in 1884.: 132 Oliver Heaviside also discovered it independently.

El fenómeno de la electricidad se ha estudiado desde la antigüedad, pero su estudio científico comenzó en los siglos XVII y XVIII. A finales del siglo XIX, los ingenieros lograron aprovecharla para uso doméstico e industrial.
