Introduction. Ovarian cancer is a major cause of morbidity and mortality among gynecological malignancies [1]. The current standard treatment of epithelial ovarian cancer (EOC) of all histological subtypes involves primary optimal debulking surgery followed by cisplatin-based chemotherapy.

Brain Metastases from Epithelial Ovarian Cancer: A Review

Abstract. The aim of this review is to provide an overview of the epidemiology, pathogenesis, diagnosis, and management of brain metastases from epithelial ovarian cancer. The current standard of care for the management of brain metastases from epithelial ovarian cancer is whole-brain radiotherapy (WBRT) followed by stereotactic radiosurgery (SRS) for oligometastatic disease. The use of WBRT is associated with cognitive and quality of life (QoL) side effects, and the use of SRS is associated with a risk of local recurrence. The use of WBRT followed by SRS for oligometastatic disease is a promising approach that warrants further investigation.

Intestinal Occlusion and Abdomino-pelvic Cancer

Intestinal occlusion is a complication of abdominal or pelvic cancer. It is responsible for symptoms such as abdominal pain, difficulty swallowing, and, in some cases, vomiting. It is often a sign of advanced disease and is associated with a poor prognosis. The management of intestinal occlusion depends on the underlying cause and the patient's overall health. Treatment options include surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation therapy.

Intestinal Occlusion and Abdomino-pelvic Cancer

Intestinal occlusion (IO) is a complication of abdominal or pelvic cancer (CP). It is the most common cause of IO, followed by benign disease. IO is characterized by the obstruction of the intestinal lumen, which can lead to abdominal pain, vomiting, and constipation. The management of IO depends on the underlying cause and the patient's overall health. Treatment options include surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation therapy.
