T. Ritchey: General Morphological Analysis _____ 3 The first to use the term morphology as an explicitly defined scientific method would seem to be J. W. von Goethe (1749-1832), especially in his "comparative morphology" in botany.

General Morphological Analysis

Environmental niche modelling, alternatively known as species distribution modelling, (ecological) niche modelling, predictive habitat distribution modelling, and climate envelope modelling refers to the process of using computer algorithms to predict the distribution of species in geographic space on the basis of a mathematical representation of their known distribution in environmental space ...
